Dear Dr. Jonathon Woodson:

I am writing to request that the Tricare Management Activity determine whether it has ever provided reimbursement for so-called "gay conversion therapy," or any similar efforts on the part of health practitioners to "change" a patient's sexual orientation.

The major accredited professional associations of mental health practitioners and researchers in the United States have recognized for nearly 40 years that being gay, lesbian, or bisexual is not a disease, disorder, illness, deficiency, or shortcoming. Despite this professional consensus, multiple news reports demonstrate that individuals claiming to be mental health professionals are engaging in harmful tactics to try to "convert" or "cure" gay, lesbian, transgender, and bisexual minors. Unfortunately, I have reason to believe that the federal government may in fact be providing reimbursement for these abusive efforts. My cursory investigation found one practitioner, named Paul McNulty, who had TRICARE eligibility. E-mails from McNulty indicate that he may be misusing an otherwise allowable coding designation to "superbill" private and public insurance companies for a treatment that would not otherwise be allowable by federal law or private insurance policies.

Efforts by mental health practitioners to change the sexual orientation of lesbian, gay, transgender, and bisexual minors are an abuse of their authority. These treatments can include unwanted sexual play, talk "therapy" designed to alienate minors from their parents, and behavioral therapy techniques many victims have likened to psychological torture.<sup>1</sup> Due to the opaque coding of psychological treatment and privacy concerns involved, further investigation by your office is necessary to determine if taxpayer funds are being used for these efforts.

Given these concerns, please respond in writing to the following questions:

1. What federal regulations exist regarding the use of sexual orientation change efforts on minors?
2. Are these “services” financed or reimbursed by TRICARE or any other federal health care coverage programs?
3. Is TRICARE aware of any instances of health providers seeking reimbursement for sexual orientation change efforts or similar services? If so, how many instances, and for how much money? If reimbursement was denied, are those providers still receiving or eligible for TRICARE reimbursement?
4. What mechanisms are available to patients to report fraud or harmful provider practices related to and including sexual orientation change efforts?
5. Does TRICARE have sufficient authority to ensure it is not reimbursing health care providers for these or similar efforts? If so, please explain why or why not.

The significant budget constraints on our public healthcare system necessitate careful oversight to ensure no taxpayer dollars go toward services that are not scientifically sound or medically necessary. Thank you for your attention to this matter and I look forward to working with you to promote the health and welfare of American children.

Sincerely,

Jackie Speier
